COTTON GROWERS CONVENTION.

A Brazos County committeeman for the Southern States Cotton corporation requests the Eagle to announce the State Cotton Growers Convention to be held in Dallas on July 10, 11 and 12.

All indications show that without doubt this will be one of the greatest conventions ever held by the Southern States Cotton Corporation. The season during which the convention will be held is especially favorable for the attendance of large numbers of people who have not been in position to attend our previous meetings. We confidently expect a record-breaking rally, the representation from banking and business concerns being especially strong.

It is more than likely that reduced railroad rates will be given. All parties desiring to attend the convention can ascertain full information in regard to rates, etc., by inquiring of the railroad agents before the date of the convention.

The Perfect Suitor.

"Sir," began the young man, "I desire to ask for the hand of your daughter Belinda in marriage."

The father gave him one quick, searching stare. Then he demanded crisply:

"What is your rating?"

"My share of father's estate was two Broadway blocks."

The father held out his hand.

"Very good. Now go to her mother. Nothing can be settled until"—

"I understand," said the young man, and he went away, thinking profoundly.

"Madam," he began, "I wish to have your permission to pay my addresses to your daughter."

She looked at him haughtily.

"With a view to an alliance with our house?" she demanded incredulously.

"Yes, madam. I love"—

"One moment, please. Your family?"

"We trace our descent to Isabella de Vermandois."

She put out both hands.—Hartford Post.

CITY COUNCIL MEETING

Paving Bids Considered and All Eliminated But Three—Council Will Meet Again Tonight.

The City Council met yesterday afternoon to hear the report of the engineers who tabulated the bids of the paving concerns, and after several hours of discussion and deliberation, seven of the ten bids were eliminated and their certified checks returned.

The Council is now considering three propositions: The Southern Westrumite Co., of Houston; the General Construction Co., of Fort Worth, and the Eureka Construction Co., of Houston. The general construction bid is on fibre brick laid flat with an asphalt filler to render it noiseless. Westrumite is an asphalt mixed cold with crushed rock by a patent process, while the Eureka Company lay a similar pavement, pouring the asphalt on hot. The samples of the two are much the same in appearance.

For estimation purposes the engineers figured on the complete paving, including curbs, gutters, etc., of 16,000 square yards, laid on a five-inch concrete base. The figures are: Westrumite, $35,543.95; General Construction Co., brick, $39,128.49; Eureka Construction Co., asphaltic concrete, $35,954.95.

The total yardage of Main street is: With center parking, 14,026 square yards; with side parking, 12,281 square yards; present width, 21,765 square yards.

The Council intends to consider well before the final contract is let, and is taking into consideration the time in which the pavements can be laid, according to the statements of the contractors.

The Council will meet tonight in its regular monthly meeting, at which time the bids will be further considered.

ST. ANTHONY'S DAY

Large Crowds in Attendance and Visiting Priests Assist Father DeSimone.

Today is known on the calendar of saints as St. Anthony's day, and is being celebrated with special services and feast by the Italian Catholics in this city as the day of their patron saint, for whom St. Anthony's church in this city is named.

A large and excellent band arrived yesterday afternoon from Beaumont to furnish music for the occasion and a vesper was held at the church last night with a musical program by the band.

This morning low mass was celebrated at seven and at eight, and high mass at ten. Music will last throughout the day.

Father DeSimone, the regular pastor of St. Anthony's church, is being assisted by Father Spinauchet of Cameron, Father Haynes of Teague and Father Gleissner of Bryan.

A great number gathered for the feast day, many coming in on the evening trains yesterday from neighboring towns, and a great many more came in this morning from the Brazos bottom and the territory around Bryan.

The Great Marshal Ney.

A recent English book about Marshal Ney, Napoleon's heroic lieutenant, "the bravest of the brave," brings out some interesting facts. This Frenchman was really a German. He was born at Searlouis, now in Prussia, and then and always German. He spoke only German as a child. He was red haired, with a wide face and round blue eyes. Five feet eight inches in height, he had a short body and long legs. His comrades called him "le rougeot," which was equivalent to "carrots" or "bricktop." He was forty-six years old at Waterloo. So was Napoleon. So was Wellington. Marshal Ney was a man who was trained to the hardships of a workman's life. His father was a cooper, and in his boyhood work in his father's business he was accustomed to toil and exposure. This enabled him to sleep placidly in the snow on the return from Moscow, wrapped in his cloak, "with the starved, ragged soldiers of the grand army keeping guard and the Cossacks prowling around in the darkness."

The Statistical Fiend.

We all know the bore that begins a sentence, "Statistics show." He can tell you how the daily flow of beer in St. Louis compares with the amount of Mississippi water that passes the city in twenty-four hours. He can state the tonnage of all ocean greyhounds, bulldogs, Pomeranians and curs of low degree. He knows how many men were slain in battles from that of Abancay or Aboukir to that of Zurich or Zeltchow. He speaks as one having authority, and even those who run at his approach shake the head solemnly: "If old Augur says so it must be so." What a relief it is to find Sir William Ramsay admitting that the most accurate of statistics may lie! Some time ago the statement was made that 50 per cent of the total abstinents in a regiment stationed in India had died within a year. It turned out that the whole number was two, and one, while taking his morning walk, had been eaten by a tiger.—Philip Hale in Boston Herald.

Use of the Left Hand.

Of just how much value, daily value, is your left hand to you aside from it being a natural appendage of your left wrist? It is estimated that hardly one person out of ten uses his left hand 5 per cent of the 100 per cent of its usefulness from getting up in the morning until going to bed at night. In this respect the left handed person, although often made the butt of the "lefty" stigma, is far superior to his right handed neighbor. There is hardly a left handed man or woman who cannot use the right hand much more freely and with stronger grip than the right handed man or woman can use the left. So weak is the left hand of many men and women that, although not crippled in any way and perfect as to shape and size, nevertheless it is held back and guarded and restricted as though it were an injured member. In lifting weights or grasping objects with the firmness necessary for moving or shifting the right handed person makes the right hand do three-fourths of the work.—New York Sun.

A Woman at Greenwich Observatory.

"When we visited Greenwich observatory," said the traveler, "I set my watch by the observatory clock. Since everybody else who has a watch does that, nobody paid any attention to me, but my wife created a big enough sensation for both of us."

"She had done a little shopping before we went down to Greenwich. In her hand bag she carried a remnant of lace. Far more attractive to her than the observatory's wonderful clock were the little iron pegs driven into the observatory wall, which represented the true measure of the British yard, two feet, one foot, six inches and three inches.

"Just at 1 o'clock out came her bit of lace, and at the minute when everybody else stood impressed with the fact that standard time for a large part of the civilized world was being set within those walls my wife stood before the iron pegs calmly measuring lace."—New York Times.

THREE WORDS

Lawyer Received $10,000

For "Stop! Look! Listen!"

WORDS are wonderful things. A Chicago publisher displays in his windows the legend, "Words are the only things that live forever."

A lawyer was once asked by the president of a railroad to suggest a sign that could be posted at railroad crossings—something that would prevent accidents and would also be effective in defending damage suits when accidents occurred.

He suggested the three words, "Stop! Look! Listen!" He received a fee of $10,000, and his suggestion was worth it because those words, posted at grade crossings, prevented many accidents.

Do you believe in signs? And do you obey them when you see them? Do you stop, look and listen? You ought to, because by watching these warnings as they appear in our advertising columns you can

AVOID BEING SWINDLED BY SUBSTITUTES.

Every advertisement is a warning sign. It suggests that you stop, look and listen before proceeding. In other words, investigate and thereby avoid the shoddy, the impure, the worthless.
